

Imaginosity is, again, well under way in school. For those of you unfamiliar with this creative project, it takes place every Friday under the guidance of professional artist, Simon Crook. The children from across the school work in mixed age groups with the very oldest supporting the very youngest, participating in a whole range of exciting activities from cooking to photography, construction to collage. It is a real privilege to see our children working so harmoniously with such engagement. Last year, the project culminated in a series of very successful public events.
